invite you to the international [online] symposium

MAKING SENSE OF TOLERATION

Tuesday, November 23 2021

Symposium presentation:

Both historically and conceptually, toleration has been one of the foundational characteristics that define the very essence of a plurally diverse polity and the basic virtue associated with a liberal conception of citizenship. Despite its central role in contemporary political thought, toleration remains to this day subject to various controversies and disagreements stemming from the many paradoxes, dilemmas and puzzles associated with it. Its ambivalent character and its troubling nature together with its enigmatic origins and complex legacy are just some of the character traits toleration has usually been associated with.

This international [online] symposium brings together a number of contributors to The Palgrave Handbook of Toleration (<https://link.springer.com/referencework/10.1007/978-3-030-03227-2#toc>) that discuss some of the perennial questions toleration has been associated with. It aims identify the distinguishing features of contemporary discussions over toleration as well as to elucidate the most pressing and challenging controversies these discussions have been faced with.

The Making Sense of Toleration online symposium will be carried out as a Teams Webinar. This symposium is free and open to the public.
